Brent Cross Cricklewood Transformation Update

Have your say on the emerging plans for Clitterhouse Playing Fields

The Brent Cross Town team has revealed the initial plans for the rejuvenation of Clitterhouse Playing Fields with an online exhibition which is now open. Clitterhouse Playing Fields is the 44-acre open green space, which sits at the centre of the new 180-acre, net zero carbon park town, Brent Cross Town. It is being reinvented as an area where people can relax and enjoy the open spaces, grab a coffee, and meet with friends. There will also be a wide variety of new sports and play facilities that are accessible to all, as well as clear and safe walking routes throughout.

Running until Sunday 27 March the online exhibition shows how feedback has been incorporated into the designs for the new playing fields from the first round of consultation last year.

Station's eastern entrance takes shape

Brent Cross West's eastern entrance is starting to shape up. Designed by architects Studio Egret West, the timber frames and biodiversity are a key feature for this entrance, which will provide the front door to the new Brent Cross Town development. The timber beams and columns are now in place, as well as the lift shafts, and the four escalators.

CONSTRUCTION UPDATE MARCH 2022

Bye Bye Bertie Bin

The Brent Cross West station team, led by Volker Fitzpatrick's Senior Works Manager, Dave Goodey, rolled up their sleeves to help out the community after receiving word that a local primary school had been left with a rusty old bin that had been taking up space for many years.

Curtis Sweeney, Executive Headteacher of St John's CofE Primary School, said: "Bertie Bin, not only has been an eyesore in our playground, it has taken up much needed space. It had not been emptied for many years and the company that initially installed it wanted nothing to do with it. We are so grateful!"

Profile On: Spruce & Larch café

Spruce & Larch is the popular new café and eatery that is serving the community within the Brent Cross Town Visitor Pavilion. As well as delicious coffee, fresh pastries and sandwiches the café has a vast collection of houseplants for sale.

It is locally run too! We spoke to the team running Spruce and Larch to find out more. Read their stories here.

Claremont Way retailers get ready to open

Spruce and Larch won't be the new kids on the block for long with new retailers just weeks away from throwing open their doors for business. Teams have been busy with the fit out for three new food and beverage outlets Happy Face Pizza, Karma Bread Bakery and Cricklewood Coffee Roasters.
