Brent Cross Cricklewood Transformation Update

Eid fun at Claremont Park this weekend

Join us for the celebration of Eid at Claremont Park on Saturday 29 April from 12 to 4pm. Claremont Park will be providing a range of fun activities and entertainment for families and children, including face painting, live music, games, henna, halal food and more.

The event is open for everyone to attend and celebrate together.

More details on the event can be found here.

A fun-filled and crafty Spring break

The Eid event follows two weeks of fun Spring activities that Brent Cross Town hosted during the half-term break. A fantastic 700 local children enjoyed free activities which included art and craft workshops hosted by artist, Anna van der Poorten, in Claremont Park.

Children also completed a variety of willow 2D sculptures celebrating nature in Claremont Park along with a range of make and take crafts. A free Spring Nature Trail and social games was also hosted by F.U.S.E. Youth Project.

Views from the skies

Have a peek at the latest drone footage of how Brent Cross Town is transforming. You can now see Brent Cross West really taking shape, and the planned grand entrance into Brent Cross Town. You can also see the construction of the new buildings facing Claremont Park and the surrounding area.

The footage is captured by Galldris, one of the infrastructure contractors building the streets and installing services for Brent Cross Town.

Celebrating our local area in June

Barnet Council has awarded £15,000 to individuals and community groups organising 'learn and discover' events for the London Festival of Architecture in June.

The festival will focus on a route that takes people from Edgware through Colindale to Brent Cross, to showcase local history, cultural infrastructure and inclusive projects that empower communities.
