Brent Cross Cricklewood Transformation Update

Barnet Council has today released a 'first look' video of the new 7,000 square metre, four platform station, Brent Cross West, which is expected to open later this year.

The impressive 16-metre-high building includes a pedestrian and cycle overbridge that will connect the areas of Barnet and Brent via the Midland Main Line for the first time in 150 years.

The new video gives an aerial view of the huge new Brent Cross West station which, when it opens, will be the first major new mainline station in London in over a decade. The station will sit between Cricklewood and Hendon stations on the Midland Main Line. Thameslink trains will connect central London to Brent Cross in as little as 12 minutes, with up to eight trains an hour at peak times.

Keep an eye on our website for more information on the opening date and to read more about the project.

Brent Cross Town reaches new heights

Barnet's new neighbourhood, Brent Cross Town, reached new heights this week when it celebrated the 'topping out' of its first two buildings across the 180-acre development site.

It was marked by Barnet Council ward members, our development partners and a future resident who together smoothed the last piece of concrete on the top of the building.

Making our roads safer for everyone

You may have spotted in the last few weeks the installation of double yellow lines across Claremont Road.

This was installed following feedback from residents and to avoid parking issues. Our teams have worked hard to improve safety in the local area for all road users.
